Education:	Ph.D. in International Affairs (International Law) 1981, University of Miami, Coral Gables, FL, USA.
	M.A. in Political Science (1979), The Graduate Faculty: New School for Social Research, NYC, NY, USA. All course requirements necessary for the Doctorate degree in the Department of Political Science were completed.
	M.A. in Liberal Studies (1976), State University of New York, Plattsburgh, NY, USA.
	B.A. in Economics and Political Science (1976), State University of New York, Plattsburgh, NY, USA.

Experience:

Since 1981	I held several junior and senior level positions in the private and public sectors in the USA and abroad. I participated and gained the skills pertaining to business and institutional building, particularly in the areas of education, publishing, planning, turnkey operations, international trade, distribution and finance.
2005-	Adjunct Professor of Government, Social Science Division, Brookhaven College, 3939 Valley View Lane, Dallas, TX 75244.
2001-	Owned and operated private businesses in the Dallas area. I planned, developed and launched several businesses dealing with international trade, and consumer merchandise. All businesses realized profit in the first year of operation. The chain of consumer electronics was sold in January 2005.
1998-2001	Vice President, Z.A.R. International, Inc.: a multi-million dollar distributor of consumer electronics. This corporation was sold to Surround Sound in 2001.
1995-1998	Dean, the Jerusalem School of Economics and Diplomacy (JSED), the first independent, non-profit graduate school in the Middle East. As the Dean of the newly founded school, I was the highest administrative and academic officer directly responsible to a USA based Board of Trustees. I negotiated collaboration and teaching agreements with renowned European and American Universities in the areas of Economics, Law, and Diplomacy. I participated in the curriculum and course development and formulated the school's protocols and policies. JSED was closed due to unfavorable conditions in Palestine.

1992-1995 Senior Trade Consultants, Amana International Trade Consultants, Brattleboro, VT, USA. Amana brokered business between American and Saudi companies. I left Amana to become the Dean of the Jerusalem School of Economics and Diplomacy.

1985-1992 Visiting Professor at Keene State College, Keene, NH, Departments of Political Science and History. I taught 2 courses per semester at the Department of Political Science and occasionally at the Department of History.

1981-1992 Publisher and General Editor, Amana Books, Brattleboro, VT, USA. I edited and published 54 titles on global issues and intercultural understanding. I participated in formulating and executing all policies regarding finance, staff, acquisition of manuscripts, editing, marketing and customer relations. Recently, I am working to re-launch Amana Books as a digital publishing house.

Also during this period, I was the Publisher of Southern Vermont Magazine, a general interest magazine, and Homes and Properties of Vermont and Homes and Properties of New Hampshire. The magazines were sold in 1992.

1981-1992 Editor, The Search: Journal for Arab and Islamic Studies. This was the first quarterly academic journal to be published in the United States on Arab and Islamic affairs. I edited and coordinated the publication of nine volumes. The Journal is the publication of the Center for Advanced International Studies, CAIS.

1982- Serves as a member of the Board of Trustees and as an officer of several non-profit community and educational organizations including the Center for Advanced International Studies.

1976-1979 Researcher, The Palestine Mission to the United Nations, New York City, NY. As a graduate research intern, I carried out extensive research on the Palestine Question and the nature, structure and workings of the United Nations. The experience gained during this internship enabled me to design college courses on the United Nations (Model UN), International Organizations and International Law.

Publications:

1976-	Author, co-Author, Editor, and co-Editor of numerous books, articles, reports, and book reviews. Additionally, I participated in conferences; chaired panels; and organized academic conferences.
